 Augusta, Me., Aug. 22.—A general round-up of draft "sluggers" has been started in several of the leading cities of Maine by local police officials under the direction of the state of the Federal Department of Justice.  With an extra swag of silk, while the tear beamed approval and signed the check.
 Although it is not customary to describe the contents of the bridegroom, Caruso's splendid bride, wearing leather bottom boots with white silk uppers made an impression to be ignored, for they fairly twinkled as he glanced and bounded with happiness and good will.
 The traffic patterns were kept extra busy by the stream of delivery trucks bearing bridal finery and the maidens to the bridegroom's hotel, where at least 100 telegrams had been received from friends.
 Although the bride, father and stepmother, Mr. and Mrs. Park Benjamin, did not want Caruso as their son-in-law, now that the deed is done they will probably "make the best of it."

 COLD HAVE BEEN AVOIDED.
 The mistakes and errors could probably have been avoided, the committee said if the program had been laid out by one man and followed by skillful aeronautical engineers and practical fliers.
 "The brief summary is not a whitening of the lily," the report added. "Much more is to be done than what is being done. It is glad to report that while it believes there are just many things to be remedied, nevertheless we are approaching a period when quantity production may be hoped for."
 No charges of graft in aircraft production were investigated. That phase of the situation was left entirely to Charles E. Hughes and the Department of Justice.
 "Our inquiry has been so important an confidence have permitted," the report added. "The committee formally recommended the abandonment of a department of aeronautics with a staff of 400 and a budget of $10,000,000."

 "We would thus place power and responsibility in the hands of a single man, creating a service not alone for this war, but for all time," the report continued. "and available for the forces of the air the same policy of administration, that has so long governed those of the land and sea."
 A committee of engineers, and pilots to visit the battlefields in France, continuing with first hand information, is also "impetuously demanded" by the committee.
 "The committee feels that the prime object of the hour is to increase in continuing quantity and the production of them should be to secure the earliest possible constructive activity of all responsible concerns and the business to full capacity," the report continued.

Many Lives Sacrificed in Experiments, Senate Investigators State in Report

production a slight change or shifting plane.

MANY LIVES SACRIFICED.

Fighting plane spent on an effort to catch the Bristol fighter and de Havilland to the Liberty motor. The Bristol was put into quality production without sufficient test, more than $25,000 was expended and the lives of several men sacrificed when the machine was constructed and its manufacturer discredited.

Two thousand four hundred fighting planes were ordered in September and the order was cancelled October 5 for the reason that the slightest fighter was wanted as obsolete.

CHANGED MIND AGAIN.

Nevertheless, on April 15, this year, 1,000 single-engine fighters, known as the S. E. Flycatcher, the lightest equivalent of the French biplane were ordered. In addition, the biplane was ordered to be built in the United States.

There were 2,500 de Havilland fighters ordered, but when 1,000 had been delivered, numerous machines developed and work was stopped until the defects could be repaired.

It is stated in October, 1917, the United States had put in for producing a single-engine biplane, only one was ordered. The other should have been in quantity production, the committee believes.

Plans for the biplane were cancelled in the summer of 1917, but the tests are not yet complete.

CAUSES OF FAILURE.

Summarizing the causes of the general failure of the aircraft program, the committee said the causes were:

1.—The airplane program was largely placed in the control of the great automobile and manufacturing interests who were ignorant of aeronautical problems.

2.—There was no systematic development of the impulsive lack of creating a service which could be adapted to all classes of flying.

3.—The biplane program was not carried out with the same vigor as the Liberty motor.

4.—The failure of the biplane program was due to the lack of the use of the Liberty motor.

Dresses for Autumn

Early Showing of The Newest Ideas

Serge Tricotee Satin Georgette Jersey (see sketch of is Serge)

There is a distinction about our early Fall Models that is not to be mistaken and the restrictions of economy have done nothing to detract from the smartness of these frocks. Serges, Tricotees, Satins, Jerseys and Georgettes appear in the best advantage and heavy silk fringe, flax or rat-tail braids used in novel designs, heavy wool embroideries or beads give the touches that fascinate and distinguish the autumnal feminine. Dressy models are quite in vogue and panel and tunic effects have a decided place.

Never were there such good reasons for buying Fall clothes early

The present serious scarcity of labor has made and will continue to make your clothes cost more and more.

You will make no mistake in buying your fall clothes early.

Another thing—serges and Boileaus and velours do not grow on trees and the time has passed when they can be taken for granted. Did you realize that most of the Fall fashions will be made from cloth on hand, a great deal of which cannot be replaced when it is gone?

The earlier you buy your Fall clothes the more you will get for your money—and this applies to the finer fabrics particularly.

SWIM PRIZES ON EXHIBITION AT FILENE'S

140 Girls Entered in American's Title Race; Lists Close Tomorrow Noon

Through the courtesy of William Filene's Sons Company the five prizes to be awarded the first five winners in the big swim of the Boston AMERICAN in Charles River Basin Saturday afternoon are on exhibition in the window of their establishment at Summer and Washington streets.

The prizes are very handsome. They were selected by the Swimming Editor as the most appropriate. The prize are:

First—Three-piece silver toilet set and tray, colonial pattern.

Second—Three-piece silver toilet set.

Third—Three-piece silver toilet set, Fifth-River brand tray.

The winner of the first prize will also be accredited with being New England's champion girl swimmer for 1918. All other girls who finish the race, a distance up and down stream of one and one-half miles and 200 feet, will receive a handsome souvenir.

Don Oshies, announcer at the Armory A. A., will do the announcing at Saturday's event. It will be fortified with a large menagerie and in the over-inflatable war will keep the operators in good humor telling of the progress of the race and who is in the lead.

To date there are 140 girls entered for the race. This is an exceptionally large number. The "swim" at the start will be worth seeing. The race is free to everybody. It will be a thrilling event. The course along the wall of the Charles River Basin, from the foot of the Metropolitan Park Commission up stream to the state boat near Harvard Bridge and then down stream to starting point. Lieutenant Bravely will be in charge of a detail of police and assist Lieutenant Albert Chapman of the Metropolitan Park force in caring for the large crowd anticipated to attend. Dr. John M. P. O'Connor of Burlington Avenue, Mark Lane and Dr. Corcoran T. Hurley of Dudley street, Roxbury, and a corps of women nurses will be on hand to care for the needs of the contestants if first aid treatment is necessary.

Remember, girls, entries will close tomorrow noon.

Law-Defying Trusts Cannot Be Controlled by Prosecutions

The New York Evening Post, which has recently been acquired by one of the partners of J. Pierpont Morgan & Co., Wall street bankers, in an elaborate editorial attacks the proposal of the Federal Trade Commission that the National Government shall take the beef trust's stockyards, where cattle are slaughtered, take the beef trust's refrigerator cars and refrigerating plants in the different localities, and, having taken these properties, shall permit all persons to use them in the business of slaughtering cattle and transporting meat upon terms of absolute equality. The reason the Federal Trade Commission urges the seizure of the stockyards, refrigerator cars and refrigerating plants is that by the possession of these plants the beef trust is able to maintain its monopoly—a monopoly which the Federal Trade Commission, after an elaborate investigation, declares to be of the most vicious, unpatriotic and dangerous character, one that hesitates at nothing and stoops to everything which will produce an extra dollar from the pockets of the American people, and does it as boldly and as shamelessly in time of war as in time of profound peace.

The government alleges that the four members of this beef trust have made recently $178,000,000 out of the great necessities of life of our people, and points out that the Wall street bankers are working into the beef trust. The house of J. Pierpont Morgan, one of whose partners owns the New York Evening Post, is one of the bankers that is interested in the beef trust. Of course it is proper enough for the New York Evening Post to be owned by a partner of this banking house, and to defend the interest of its owner so long as the readers understand the situation.

Now the New York Evening Post says that the government ought not to take away the means by which the beef trust gets and maintains its monopoly and is thus able to plunder both the consumer and the producer, the people of the cities who eat the meat and the farmers throughout the country who produce the cattle. But, of course, the New York Evening Post is under the necessity of suggesting some remedy for the intolerable extortions and violations of law with which the government charges the beef trust. So it suggests that the government prosecute these beef trust people criminally.

It is to smile! We have had the anti-trust law on our statute books for more than twenty-five years. During all that period men of great wealth have violated it openly and secretly. The great trusts have grown faster since the law was passed than they ever grew before. It is the biggest joke in the whole repertoire of jokes contained in our laws that attempt to regulate and control the rapacity of big business. Not once during all that period of open, defiant, continuous violation of the anti-trust law has a single man of any means ever been put in the shadow of a jail. Little, insignificant fines have been imposed, amounting not to one-thousandth part of the profits obtained by the violation of the law. These fines, of course, are added as an insignificant part of the cost of doing business. The administration of the anti-trust law has brought our government into contempt; it has produced as much anarchistic sentiment in this country as anything else, because when you cannot make your law work against the wealthy you cannot expect other men to respect the law.

The war, by overcoming the tremendous inertia of the country, has aroused our intelligent classes to an appreciation of the fact that you cannot regulate big business successfully. Between a man's crime and jail he has to pass into the hands of many officials, any one of whom if crooked can set him free—investigators, grand juries, district attorneys, witnesses, judges and Governors. A small part of the tremendous profits which these trusts make by violating the law has always been sufficient to keep them safe from its only effective penalty—imprisonment. The counsel for the Federal Trade Commission, Francis J. Heney, is one of the very few men in this country who has succeeded in putting the fear of the law in the heart of big business. He did it while he was prosecuting attorney in San Francisco, and he nearly lost his life from a pistol shot in the courtroom while he was doing it.

Mr. Heney and the Federal Trade Commission understand the futility of attempting to apply the criminal law to these trusts. They know that regulation of big business is a failure, and that the only relief which the people can obtain is, when a private monopoly has been established to the injury of the people, promptly to make it a PUBLIC monopoly.

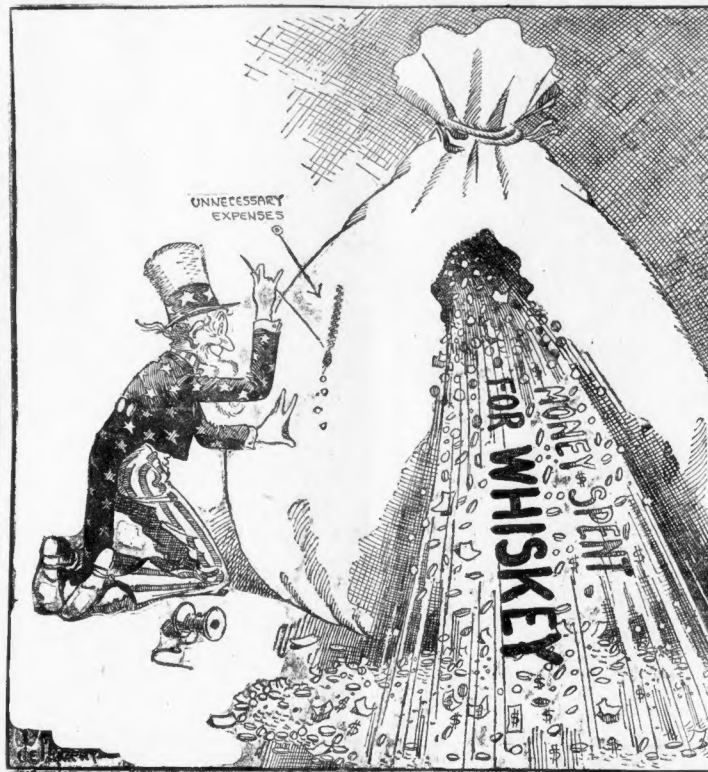

The people of this country owe to Mr. Heney and the Federal Trade Commission an imperishable debt of gratitude for their courageous labors. They will be pursued relentlessly by big business whose hatred they have aroused. Every dark corner that they pass in their political course they will be struck at by some agent of these master crooks. That they have suggested the remedy is apparent from the fact that controlled newspapers like the New York Evening Post cry out against the plan.

DON'T FUSS ALL THE TIME

Don't be a fussy. In other words, don't be a jumpjack in movement and mind. Cultivate repose. Learn to rest; to relax fully. You will never rest if your mind is in a continual turmoil over little things which you permit to annoy you. Suppose in an argument you do know you are right. Possibly the one who differs with you also knows you are technically right, but there may be something bigger than formal technicalities which is seen by the other person. While you are practicing the self-control necessary to make you get more out of life, you may discover there are bigger issues than the ones over which you are fretting. You will be fortunate if you make such a discovery early in life, for it means you are going to have much more enjoyment. You sometimes wonder why the children do not like to be with you more than a few minutes at a time. You are hurt because so few people sympathize with you in your fine principles; this is because you are a fussy, and you tire every one out—including yourself.

CLIMBER IS A MENACE TO OUR COMFORT

By Winifred Black

THE Name Climber has gone. Thank goodness. Now I'll be able to speak without catching my breath and counting ten.

What is the Name Climber? Don't you know one? Well, I'll tell you about them, what they are, and who they are, and why they are, and what they'll do to you if you don't look out.

A Name Climber is one who climbs or tries to climb by the use of names.

If you are lurching with the Name Climber be careful whose name you mention. Don't say in an offhand instant, "When I was lurching with Mary Smith the other day she said—"

She Uses Every One

If you do, the Name Climber will snatch at Mary Smith, and, by hook or crook, she'll meet her some day by saying she's a dear friend of a dear friend of mine and my friend is just crazy for me to know her.

I mentioned Anna James in the presence of a Name Climber about three weeks ago, and now the Name Climber knows Anna, and Anna's sister, and Anna's friends, and Anna's brother-in-law's cousin, and the cousin's business partner, and his brother, and the brother's sister-in-law, and whenever she has some little scheme of her own to put through there they all are ready for her to use—and she'll use them. Don't make any mistake about that.

She'll use them, and she'll use you, and she'll use every breath you draw and every syllable that escapes you—thats why we call her a Name Climber.

Didn't you know that the Name Climber refers to you as Mama when she's telling you what color your hair was before you started to dye it, and how many pieces of real silver there are in the dining room set, and who sent you the Wauwau fish, and why you carry it? Why, yes she does! And if you don't ask her to your parties she'll come anyhow and say she knew you thought she was out of town, or else she'll boldly announce that she knew you didn't want her and so she was determined to be there just to show you.

And if you're foolish and snooty-humored you'll hate and let it go at that, but some day you'll wish you hadn't, for the Name Climber will climb up on you, or your name, and step right in your face while she's doing it, without even an apology.

I was awfully worried about the Name Climber for a while. I found she was using me and all my friends, but suddenly it dawned upon me that everybody else knew her as well as I did, and that she couldn't hurt me, no matter how hard she tried.

So after this I'm not going to be at home when the Name Climber calls. And if she's cross about it I really don't believe I care.

Living Others' Lives

Poor Name Climber, she isn't really such a bad sort after all, or she wouldn't be if she would just stand on her own feet, and be her own self and stop trying to live other people's lives for a while.

Oh—there's the telephone! Well, the Name Climber has been to see my sister-in-law's aunt about a charity, and my sister-in-law's aunt has just rung me up to ask if I really did send the Name Climber to her.

She didn't get out of town quite quickly enough after all.

DEMOCRACY NEEDS YOUR SERVICE DAILY

By Mrs. Wilson Woodrow

AMERICA has thrown herself wholeheartedly into the war. No one with a drop of liberty-loving blood in his veins can fail to be thrilled and cheered by the magnificent response of our government and country to the demand made upon the nation. It is the crushing answer of a free, peace-loving people to the supercilious sneers of Junkerdom and Autocracy.

In a little over one year we have so mobilized our man-power, our machinery-power, our ship-power, our money-power and our brain-power that Berlin already sees the handwriting on the wall. An unwelcome and peace-loving nation, we have already shown Germany some things about this game for which she has been preparing for forty years, and before we are through with her we are going to show her a whole lot more.

But that does not mean we can afford to relax in our efforts or to fold our hands in satisfaction over what we have accomplished. Until the victory is finally won every man, woman and child should feel that he or she is enlisted in the war, and that no single personal stroke should be abated which will aid in its successful prosecution.

Service at Home

I think most of us do feel that. Every day I receive letters, chiefly from girls and women, asking: "What can I do to help?"

There is something that everybody can do, and that is to prevent waste and stop extravagance; or, as has been aptly said, those two national faults of ours are silent allies of the enemy. Just remember that every bit of waste, every needless expenditure, every extravagance is a blow to the war which you are responsible, takes just that much force from the driving power that America must put into it.

Germany, naturally thrifty, makes a distinct specialty of salvage and reclamation processes. Why should we let the enemy have our advantage over us in any respect?

So if you who have written to me really want to help, here is your chance. There is no lack of opportunity, for as yet hardly more than the surface of the field has been scratched. All that you can save, all that you can spare, all that you can give, the government needs for the tremendous task of equipping our army and navy.

A Fine Work

Go through your attic, your cellar, your lumber room, your store closets. There is no single article there but can be used. For the requirements of the government and the various war chest-ties there is a great demand for old rubbers, old rubber bags, rubber tubing, old automobile tires, old rubber of any kind; also for old paper—newspapers, wrapping paper, scrap paper of any kind; also old tin foil and old metal of all kinds—tin pans and other tubes, milk bottle caps, old locks, etc.

All these articles can be turned back to the mills, and in every town or city there is some organization busily engaged in collecting and forwarding them, employing the proceeds in some recognized form of war relief.

Old gold and silver, old jewelry, bric-a-brac, bedrooms and bedrooms are eagerly sought after to be sold at second hand or else to be melted up in order to buy equipment and comforts for our soldiers. Old leather, old clothes and shoes, old knives and forks, and old tinners are desired by the Red Cross and by various organizations for the relief of French and Belgian refugees. Books can be turned over to the Library War Service, and recent magazines with a one-cent stamp attached will be taken by the postman and delivered to the proper authority.

This tragic chapter of contemporary history is told by his priest, Father John of the Uspensky Cathedral, exclusively in next Sunday's
